We are writing to request your support for the third annual Thomas Jefferson Intermediate Open in Informatics, which is scheduled to take place on Saturday, May 11, 2024.

What is TJ IOI?

TJ IOI is a computer science competition for high school students in the Northern Virginia area, run by the Computer Team at TJHSST. Students compete in groups of three to solve competitive programming problems. Our goal is to incite passion for computer science in a friendly, teamwork-focused environment.

Although many high schoolers have taken computer science courses at their schools, they may lack other avenues to pursue their study of computer science. We aim to provide such an opportunity by exposing competitors to advanced algorithms and data structures that go beyond the curriculum of AP Computer Science.

Why do we need your support?

We will award prizes to the top teams and provide lunch and T-shirts to contestants, coaches, and volunteers. All of this requires financial support, and your sponsorship is crucial to making this exciting competition a reality. Based on your contribution, we would be happy to recognize your organization as described in the table below.

Sponsorship tiers are up for negotiation. If you can contribute physical prizes (for all three team members), or if you have other suggestions for collaboration, we would love that too! We would also be happy to answer any questions you have. Regardless, please do not hesitate to contact us at tjioi2024@gmail.com.

Best regards,

TJ IOI Planning Committee
